

GARDNER IS NEW DESPERADO KING

Train-Mail Bandit in Daring Escape Stirs Old Time Stories.

(Special to the Gazette.)

Portland, Ore.—The West has another daring criminal, whose exploits are rivaling those of Harry Sawyer. It is the story of the escape of Roy Gardner, mail bandit extraordinary, who went down in a last stand fight to the death, as they did.

His Boast Made Good. And in his escape Gardner carried out his boast that he would not be taken to prison, or if he did would be behind the bars only a short time.

The Sheriff did, crack South-eastern Pacific train, when Gardner obtained permission to go to the lavatory. There, hidden by a confederate, he waited for the train to stop. He then slipped out unobserved by the guard and returned to the station, where he was shackled again to his companion prisoner, Norris H. Brown.

Nothing since the days of Harry Tracy has stirred peace officers in this section of the country as has the escape of Gardner.

A little more than a year ago, Gardner escaped with another prisoner, in Portland. He was being taken to McNellis Island and served a 25-year term for mail robbery.

Sister of Janesville Woman Has Harrowing Experience in Pueblo

One of the most harrowing experiences perhaps that a person could have in Pueblo, Colorado, at the time of the terrible flood there a week and a half ago, was that of Mrs. John Trechman, a sister of Mrs. T. J. Spohn, 455 South Franklin street, and an account of what she and her husband went through is told in an interesting letter received by Mrs. Spohn, it reads as follows:

"My Dear Sister: "God has preserved us, thanks be to His holy name. John did not come home until 10 o'clock yesterday (Monday, June 8) morning. For three nights we were in that dreadful suspense. We were told that he was crossing the Arkansas river on a raft. You know that he was riding at the head of the raft, the very center of the flood. My neighbors were here with food and constantly coming in to reassure me. I told them I could not recover his body I would not murmur but you know what I suffered.

"I wish you could have seen his condition when he came home; covered with mud from head to foot, his clothes literally caked on his body. He was so tired and weary about us. The neighbors ran out and actually embraced him. He could only stay until six in the evening. Had to report for duty. Every man must report for duty. Martial law has been declared since Friday night and looting is carried on despite the militia, who, when a person refuses to obey the order to butt, shoots the person down. It terrifies me to hear the shots ring out at night, along with the children.

"Negroes tried to break into the house down away. I have a gun and intend to shoot but am sick with dread and nervousness.

U. S. WILL PROBE WAR PROFITEERS

Daugherty Announces Plans for Broad Inquiry and Move to Recover.

(By Associated Press.)

Washington, D. C.—Plans for a comprehensive investigation of large war contracts were announced today Tuesday by Attorney General Daugherty, with the approval of President Harding.

The purpose is to disclose to the public whether numerous charges of irregularity relative to war contracts are justified or not.

In case the evidence warrants it, proceedings will be begun to recover money improperly obtained by contractors.

Mr. Daugherty is organizing a special bureau to handle the investigation. He said he is seeking a prominent attorney to head the bureau and to plan the inquiry will not be a muckraking expedition.

He expressed confidence that the great majority of firms which did business with the government during the war were entirely fair in their dealings and are entitled to commendation.

No announcements relative to information obtained by the public during the inquiry. Mr. Daugherty said, a report will be issued when the work is completed. He indicated that the investigation would continue for many months. Experts will be employed.

"We are not going after the little fellows," Mr. Daugherty said. "If we catch any minnows in the net we will throw them back and let them start over again."

"It is recognized that business concerns are entitled to a fair profit, but if any unconscionable dealing is obtained by dark and shady methods such action will not be upheld by the government."

PURE FOOD LAWS PRAISED BY BAKER. St. Louis.—Pure food and sanitary laws are an aid and not a hindrance to the baking industry, declared C. E. Bremer, Milwaukee, declared in an address at the concluding session Wednesday of the convention of the Retail Bakers' Association of America.

There will be no immediate reduction in the cost of bakery products, according to J. C. Lewis, Minneapolis. Prices of certain ingredients used in making bread and pastries have decreased, he said, but overhead expenses in most instances have remained stationary.

A considerable slump in business, due to housewives doing their own baking, has been noticeable, he added.

R. M. COLES IS NAMED WAUPUN PRISON HEAD. Green Bay.—R. M. Coles, superintendent of the Wisconsin state reformatory here, was elected superintendent of the state penitentiary at Waupun at the annual election of penal institution heads held by the state board of control here.

Oscar Lee, superintendent of the Industrial School for Boys, Waukesha, was elected to succeed Mr. Coles. H. E. Phillips, assistant superintendent at Waukesha, was elected to succeed Mr. Lee.

6 REASONS WHY YOU SHOULD BUILD WITH BRICK

- It's the perfect building material.
- It gives individuality in color scheme.
- It is the most economical—No painting, no cost for repairs. Low insurance. Low fuel bill.
- It is clean proof. "By fire not frost nor flood nor even time is well burned clay destroyed."
- It is durable. The monumental buildings in Babylon were erected 3800 years ago. They were built of brick. Modern cities are being built with the brick today.
- It is sanitary. It is vermin proof. It is dampness proof.

PRESIDENT SEEKS ADVICE OF ADAMS

New Republican National Committee Head to be Real Topsmooch

By DAVID LAWRENCE.
Copyright 1921, by Janesville Gazette.

Washington.—President Harding has decided to lean heavily on the new chairman of the national committee, John T. Adams, Iowa, and henceforth will seek the advice and counsel of Mr. Adams on matters of patronage.

Mr. Harding has had more than the usual run of engagements with persons interested in recommending friends for office. He has found it difficult to give undivided attention to important matters of the administration because of the avalanche of requests for time to present the virtues of candidates for jobs. Will Hays, former chairman of the national committee and now postmaster general, and Harry Daugherty, pre-convention manager for Mr. Harding, and now attorney general, have both been besieged by office-seekers of their friends so that the work of the post office department and department of justice necessarily has been affected.

Personal Representative.

It was Mr. Harding himself who was largely instrumental in the selection of Mr. Adams and it was Mr. Harding who felt the necessity for having the party machinery in the hands of one who was not himself identified with the government itself. Mr. Adams is the personal representative of President Harding on all party matters. He is the active head of the Republican party and will continue to be for at least four years which means that he will be the task of keeping the party organizations happy and interested in the next republican fight.

Everybody who knows practical politics realizes that a careful handling of patronage questions is essential to party enthusiasm. The Wilson administration made its first real blunder when it delegated to the heads of the different government departments the job of handling office-seekers. Many of Mr. Wilson's cabinet members were unfamiliar with party politics and some of Mr. Harding's secretaries. The "boys back home" who came to Washington to get jobs for themselves didn't even know the cabinet officers. They frequently were ignored altogether and didn't have personal interviews with the powers that were.

Urges Continued Activity.

Mr. Harding is trying to avoid that kind of thing. He wants every party worker to be stimulated to keep on working. So he has placed the whole responsibility for appointments on the local republican organizations which in turn must cooperate with the national Republican organization of which John T. Adams is the chief executive.

If the local republicans make a poor recommendation or if the man they recommend turns out poor, it is a reflection on the local organization and the Harding administration will feel justified in the future in looking to other republicans in that particular vicinity for political advice.

But the thing which Mr. Harding is eager to have established is an effective working organization in which the local elements in the Republican party shall co-operate with the national headquarters. So John T. Adams will maintain permanent headquarters here and will move his family to Washington. He will be at the back and call of the White House and will keep in close touch not only with party matters but with the pulse of the country on public questions as reflected in talks with the pilgrims who wander in from day to day from various parts of the country.

Doesn't Like Drives.

Mr. Adams probably will do less traveling than his predecessor, Mr. Hays, largely because there is not so much necessity for it. He himself doesn't believe in "drives" and organization work when he is in no high in progress. He will keep in touch with what is going on but will not start active campaigning until there is occasion for it.

Meanwhile all republicans who feel they are entitled to consideration in matters of patronage had better get acquainted with Chairman Adams and put their case before him. His word will count from now on.

23 Graduate at Catholic School

MILTON STUDENTS PRESENT DRAMA

"Merchant of Venice" Given by Cast of 18 in College Gym.

(Special to the Gazette.)

Milton.—The seventeenth annual Shakespearean play of Milton college, "The Merchant of Venice," was presented Tuesday night in the college gymnasium before a commendable week audience of several hundred people. Eighteen students composed the cast of characters, headed by Joe E. Johnson in the role of Shylock, and Mrs. Lenore Kuntz as Portia, the leading woman. The play was directed by Prof. L. H. Springer, head of the department of public speaking, who has been turning out successful Shakespearean productions at Milton for a number of years. He was assisted by Miss Zoe Zinn, an instructor in the English department. The Milton college orchestra, conducted by L. H. North, furnished incidental music during the drama. A string trio, composed of the Misses Ardis and Constance Bennett and Dorothy G. Maxson, played the music of scenes. The business management of the play was handled by R. H. Scholtz, assisted by the Misses Leona Sayre and Mizpah Bennett.

Knight Cord Tires

The same qualities that for years have made Knight fabric tires leaders in the nation, are the foundation of Knight Cord Tires.

This new normal-size cord tire has been received by the public in a most surprising manner.

It has been definitely accepted as a step forward in cord tire making, and the demand for it is taxing the capacity of the factory.

Not only is the Knight Cord Tire an extraordinary tire from the standpoint of mileage, but it is a handsome tire that adds to the appearance of any car to which it is applied.

It is black with a white side stripe that distinguishes it in a striking way.

We have a complete line of Knight Cord Tires, and recommend them to all our customers.

We Keep You Healthy

With bare hands alone we give the Chiropractic adjustments which will not only make you healthy but keep you healthy. We locate the cause of your disease and having located it, adjust it so that life force which has been interrupted in its journey through the nerves to the various organs of the body again flows uninterrupted. We are here to serve you. That is our primary object. If we cannot help you we will tell you so. During the last quarter of a century thousands have been benefitted through Chiropractic adjustments. You, too, should try them.

THE NERVE SYSTEM

Showing clearly how each part of the body is supplied by nerves from the brain and how each nerve leaves the backbone at a certain point. When these nerves become pinched at the spine they do not function properly and disease results at the point they supply. Removing this pressure at the spine results in uninterrupted functioning and nature restores good health. Simple isn't it? And effective.

Capt. Jonah's Fortune

By JAMES A. COOPER
Copyright by Geo. Sully Co.

Capt. Jonah's influence with the bank officials was considerable. He had arranged for the sending over of the steel chest in the expressman's care. The "security" of the chest was the easily galled Tom Petty who for the most part supplied by the same bank officer who sent the box, and who had amused himself by making a large collection of such worthless and gaudy papers.

"Alphie came smartly up the lane and started across the yard to ask for his key at the back door, when he changed to see that the shades of the parlor windows were raised half way. He looked again more sharply. Behind the lace curtains he saw Capt. Jonah in his Sunday best wearing a ring from comfortably in the center of the best rocking chair. Then he stopped, struck nerveless in his tracks, by the recognition of the figure sitting at the other window. Miss Sue!

"Alphie's jealous tears made instant capital of the situation. He had served for Miss Sue more than the allotted seven years Jacob served for Rachel. And was a comparatively stranger, a man who had lived in the community but a few weeks, to step in and bear away the prize? Yet with all his rage and sorrow, he could not bring himself to play the part of fortune hunter by asking Miss Sue to marry him. He turned abruptly away, hot rage seething in his heart, and went back to his lonely cottage.

Miss Sue's tastes were naturally simple. She had begun to dress much better than formerly, as soon as she had received the legacy from her relative. But good clothes on a careful body like Sue Ambrose last a long time.

There was one gown, a silver-gray peplia, laid away in lavender in her chest that she had worn only once, and a pair of shoes she had never worn it. It had been purchased immediately on the lawyers having paid over to her the legacy which had made such a difference in her quiet life. She had bought it for a certain occasion, and to her modest surprise that occasion had never arisen.

It must be true that the love of money is the root of all evil. Sue Ambrose's acclimated fortune of forty thousand dollars made "Alphie's" miserable, and that of Capt. Jonah did the same thing to Joe Heimford.

The Heimfords were a large family, and after his education was given him there was no money in the family exchequer for Joe Heimford. He turned to his work as government expert in ichthyology he was, not generously paid.

Had the girl been just what she seemed to be when Heimford first obtained a better understanding of her character and its possibilities for development, he might have safely considered attempting the winning of her. Heimford, however, had come to know Capt. Jonah with his phenomenal fortune and now it would be too bold a thing, the young man told himself, to pay court to the girl.

An accident soon occurred which brought to a conclusion Joe Heimford's dream.

Billy Whiskers

"Oh, these were indeed happy days," went on the Old Tig. "I lived on the fat of the land and was treated as if I were a prince in disguise, but as I grew older, larger and fatter, outgrowing basket after basket and box after box, I was put from the kitchen into the woodshed, from the woodshed into the wagon house and, finally, I landed in the pig pen with the rest of the pigs.

"I say, how I hated their dirt and squealing, and their rough, selfish ways.

"All struggled to be fed first and climbed over each other, pushing and fighting and even getting into the food trough with their feet, but it was a long time before I could eat the mess that was poured into this trough, and when Argie saw that I was growing thinner and thinner, that I could not eat and that I would not mix with the other pigs, she had a pen built purposely for me, in which I lived until I came here. I suppose I should have been living there yet had not Argie's father sold the farm and moved away.

"I am sure I cannot understand why people think hogs like dirt and in which to live. I know of one who doesn't like it any better than other animals do, although for a time forced to live in it. Another thing which seems strange to me is that the animal considered the filthiest is eaten the most, even to its ears, feet and eyes. Some people think pork is unwholesome. How can it help being unwholesome when it is forced to live in filth, their pens and yards being, generally, mudholes?

Unless you can always remain a pig, it is best never to have been one, for it is much more difficult to slip down from the ladder of life than to climb up, and what one has never had he cannot miss.

"I am afraid my story has not been a very cheerful one, but I know of one who is a very cheerful one, and most of us are forced to put up with a great deal of unkindness and unjust treatment, because we cannot speak and make our own way and get things known; more than this, we often have masters who are ignorant of what we need to make us comfortable or else are so selfishly neglected or cruel and as we cannot speak, they abuse us, knowing we cannot tell. Horses are treated the most inhumanly, for they are lashed and cut with the whip, often when their masters use them as a vent for their anger, even though they are doing their best. There are more of these brutal masters and their equally cruel children than you have and I fear, I thank you for your kind attention and will bid you good night." With these words Mrs. Pigeon slipped off the platform to make room for the next speaker.

Thomas, the toastmaster, stepped upon the platform and announced that there would be an intermission of 20 minutes in which refreshments would be served down by the spring, consisting of new-mown hay, juicy corn stalks and sparkling spring water, after which the program would be resumed.

"Thursday the Cow from Texas tells her story."

many are the legends woven around these pioneer Padres. There shortly grew up Mexican settlements around the missions which with the wonderful climate and fertile soil prospered.

The government, while under Mexican control, as more or less independent, and at the outbreak of the Mexican war, Fremont, who was later defeated for the presidency, occupied California. When peace was made, in 1848, California became United States territory. The same year gold was discovered in the Sacramento Valley and the rush of people to California began. The population grew so rapidly that in 1850 California was admitted as the thirty-first state of the Union. With its 165,297 square miles, it is the largest state except Texas. Politically, its power has been rapidly growing. California now has 13 presidential electors.

Final Examinations on at University

Madison. — Examinations, the grand finale of the school year, are occupying the attention of the 7,000 students at the University of Wisconsin. Last classes of the semester were held Thursday, Friday being an open date to give opportunity for last minute cramming for the "quizzes." Thursday, June 16, will be the last day of examinations, after which the students leave for their homes, many to return for the summer session and others to begin work for the vacation period.

The summer session this year promises to be the largest in the history of the school, university officials say.

Dinner Stories

Two powerful stevedores, who had had some sort of falling out, were engaged in unloading a vessel at a St. Louis dock. Uncomplimentary remarks and warnings of intended violence were exchanged whenever the two passed each other with their trucks.

"You just keep on pestering around wid me," declared one of the men, "an' you is gwino be able to settle a mighty big question for de settlement folks!"

"What question dat?" asked the other.

"Kin de dead speak!"

A bragart chess player played three games with a stranger and lost them all. Next day a friend asked him how he had come off. "Oh," said he, "I didn't win the rat game, and my opponent didn't lose the second. As for the third, I wanted to draw it, but he wouldn't agree."

He had just married. He had been popular indeed, but had now become a social outcast. His bride and he were dining out. A very lovely lady passed, gave him a look of recognition and a dangerous smile. So dangerous was the smile that his bride asked:

"Horace, who is that woman?"

"Horace held up his hand.

"So reasonable," he protested. "Don't go bothering me about who she is. I'll have trouble enough explaining to her who you are."

Thousands Are Nervous Wrecks
Cross, Crabbed and Care-worn
From Weak, Thin Watery Blood
without ever suspecting the real cause of their trouble — Iron-starvation.

A New York Physician says that MORE THAN ONE HALF THE POPULATION OF AMERICA PERISHES BEFORE MIDDLE AGE and that one of the chief contributory causes of this terrible waste of human life is the devastating weakness brought on by lack of iron in the blood.

THERE ARE 30,000,000,000,000 RED BLOOD CORPUSCLES IN YOUR BLOOD AND EACH ONE MUST HAVE IRON.

An enormous number of people who ought to be strong, vigorous and in the prime of life are constantly complaining of weak nerves, headaches, pains across the back, disturbed digestion, shortness of breath, a general "run-down" condition, melancholy, bad memory, etc., when the real cause of all their suffering is IRON STARVATION OF THE BLOOD.

The proof of this is shown by the fact that when organic iron is supplied to their blood, that all their multitude of symptoms often quickly disappear and the very men and women who were formerly so complaining now become strong, healthy and vigorous with even dispositions, audacious, cheerful natures.

Nature put plenty of iron in the husks of grains and the skins and peels of vegetables and fruits to enrich your blood, but modern methods of cooking throw all these things away—hence the alarming increase, in recent years, in anemia—iron starvation of the blood, with all its attendant ills.

If you are not willing to go back to nature, then you should eat more such iron-containing vegetables as spinach and carrots and reconstitute them by taking a little organic iron from time to time. But the iron you take is organic iron and not metallic iron which people usually take. Metallic iron is iron just as it comes from the action of strong acids on small pieces of iron and is therefore an entirely different thing from organic iron. Organic iron is like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lettuce and apples. It may be had from your drugstore under the name of Nuxated Iron.

Nuxated Iron represents organic iron in such a highly condensed form that one dose of it is estimated to be approximately equivalent (in organic iron content) to eating one-half quart of spinach, one quart of green vegetables or half a dozen apples. It's like taking extract of beef instead of eating pounds of meat.

Over 4,000,000 people annually are using Nuxated Iron. It will not injure the teeth nor disfigure the stomach. A few doses will often commence to enrich your blood and revitalize your worn-out, exhausted nerves. Your money will be refunded by the manufacturer if you do not obtain satisfactory results. Beware of substitutes. Always insist on having genuine organic iron—Nuxated Iron. Look for the letters N. I. on every tablet. At all druggists in tablet form only.

XXVI—CALIFORNIA

There is an almost unparalleled record of romance enveloping the early history of California, which even encircles the origin of the name. About 1620 a Spanish love story was published in which was published in which the thirty-first state of the Union. With its 165,297 square miles, it is the largest state except Texas. Politically, its power has been rapidly growing. California now has 13 presidential electors.
